FOURTH ANNUAL GATHERING PROVED TO BE FULL SUCCESS

ENTRY LIST LONGER THAN FOR ANY PREVIOUS FESTIVAL

AWARDS POPULAR

EVENING CONCERT SEES LARGE AUDIENCE TO WITNESS PRESENTATIONS

With the weather-man on his very best behaviour on Friday last the fears of bad weather to mar the success of the fourth annual musical festival of the Wainwright school inspectors were well swept away and the committee in charge, under the able guidance of President L. Gork, inspector of schools, and Miss Coral Rankin, his indefatigable secretary for the affair, most certainly are to be highly congratulated upon the result attained.

From a very early hour in the morning loads of children under the care of their school teachers, parents, guardians and what not, were constantly arriving to swell the enlarged entry list which this year's festival brought forth.

Shortly after the appointed hour, the three adjudicators of the work to be presented were at their posts in the appointed places, these being Mrs. Nelson Haynes, with Miss Margaret Spence as secretary, at the theatre to judge dramatic work, Mrs. Tom Gardiner, with Miss Bessie Welch as secretary, at the United church listening to the vocal strains, and Mr. G. M. Dunlap, with Miss Grace Welch as secretary, at the Masonic hall, to hear the elocutionary efforts.

And such a time as these judges and in very many instances only one or two points decided the winners of the awards, and indeed all the offerings from all the pupils were of a very high standard; proving without doubt the educational value of such a festival, and also the hard work for which the teachers had been responsible in these productions.

In many instances, the little actors performed "as to the manner born," the offering of "Mrs. Jarley's Wainworks" in which wet Jane Robertson only seven years of age held her audience fairly spellbound with her long and expansive oratory with regard to her (supposed) puppets. This was in the class for junior pupils of town schools, and all three entries in this class were of a high order, making it hard to fully realize that the "actors" were still in their first or second year at school.

The same can be said, too, with regard to the offerings in both other lines of endeavor—elocution and singing—for in many instances the contestants were producing offerings away beyond the average expected at such festivals and the applause of those present in all three halls— which for most of the day were literally packed to the doors by eager listeners and sightseers—was all well earned and accorded.

FIRE PLAYS HAVOC DURING HIGH WIND

The alarm of fire on Tuesday morning, during the gale of wind which was blowing at the time, saw a quick rush of the fire ladders to the home of Mr. Alex Rusk on Dominion street about nine a.m. By some unexplained means fire had started on the back porch of the premises, and this was soon whipped into a dangerous blaze by the storm. After about half-an-hour's fighting with both chemical and hose streams the blaze was quelled, although the damage was quite considerable to both property and contents. Willing neighbors quickly moved a quantity of the furniture, etc., from some of the rooms but damage was suffered from both fire and water. Insurance was carried on the building which is the property of Mr. E. Squires, but the contents were unprotected by this means. It was the first fire fight to which test the fire-protection water system has been put since its installation, and most truly vindicated the foresight of the former Town Councilors who were responsible for this splendid protection.

GOV'T AND MORTGAGE INTERESTS TO CONFER

FARMER-DEBTOR QUESTION TO BE TAKEN UP AT EDMONTON

EDMONTON—A conference of the mortgage interests of the province will be called shortly for the purpose of discussing with the government the question of policies to be adopted by the former next season in respect to farmer-debtors.

Attorney-General Lymburn is getting in touch with the mortgage men at once, and it is expected that a meeting will be arranged for the latter part of this week.

Premier Brownlee, in making this announcement said that an effort would be made to reach a definite understanding as to the procedure that the mortgage companies would follow in regard particularly to foreclosures and crop share leases.

The government is hoping that an agreement can be reached before it is found necessary to proclaim the act passed at the recent session, reducing the crop-share to mortgagees from one-third to one-fourth.

The bristles of a new paintbrush will be more pliable if soaked in turpentine for a couple of hours and allowed to dry; clean and brush thoroughly after using and repeat the treatment.

CANADA OUTLOOK BRIGHT IN WEST

HON. H. H. STEVENS MUCH IMPRESSED BY "AMAZING SPIRIT OF HOPE"

VANCOUVER—Impressed by "the amazing spirit of optimism and hope" on the Canadian prairies, Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, reached Vancouver from the east. He came west for convocation of the University of British Columbia when he will have conferred on him the honorary degree of LL.D. "There is no evidence of whining or complaining on the part of business men and farmers in the prairie provinces," he said. "Crop prospects are good and when harvest comes there should be a wide demand for labor. It is noticeable that there is a return to the old horse power in replacing machine power on the land."

He said the government is prepared to assist the provinces in placing men with agricultural experience on the land. These men, he declared, could take up semi-deserted farms.

More than 5,000 of the 15,000 auto road maps recently printed for the Alberta Development Board (southern section) have already been distributed to tourist bureaus, hotels, and other tourist headquarters throughout the United States and Canada, J. H. Hanna, secretary stated Monday. Since early spring requests have been coming in increasing numbers, and many bureaus asked for 50 to 100 copies of the new map. There have been a great number of individual requests as well.

"I believe that the great majority of the maps go into the hands of individuals who make real use of them," said Mr. Hanna. "Tourist bureaus, particularly, are careful to conserve them for the use of genuine tourists."

TENTH ANNIVERSARY WAIN. DRAMATIC CLUB

MANY CHARITABLE BENEFITS ACCRUED FROM EFFORTS LOCAL PLAYERS

The Spring of 1932 marks the tenth anniversary of the organization of the Wainwright dramatic club. On May 25th, 1932, this club was organized by a number of local men and women interested in dramatic reading and the presentation of plays.

The first officers of the club were: Mrs. W. E. Washburn, pres., Miss Marion Limpert, sec.-treas.; Mr. R. G. Dunmore, director.

The object of the club was to entertain and educate its members along dramatic lines, and to use the funds made from the presentation of plays in whatever the club considered most beneficial.

Each year since organization, plays of different types have been studied by the club, and staged in Wainwright and the neighboring towns. Dramas, comedies, farcical comedies and mystery plays have been presented and received with appreciation by the audience. Two of the plays presented were from the director, "A Little Bit O' Color" by him being one of the outstanding plays presented.

After deducting the expenses incurred by staging the plays all monies raised by the club have been used for benevolent and charitable purposes. Many and varied have been these purposes, as donations have been made to the Wood's Christian Homes at Calgary, the I.O.D.E. War Memorial at Wainwright, the Junior Red Cross, the Viking hospital, the "Not Forgotten Fund" for crippled soldiers at Edmonton, and to a fund for sending a local, crippled boy to Rochester for treatment.

There were also donations to several individual needy cases in the Wainwright district, and the club completely furnished the maternity ward of the Wainwright municipal hospital at the time of the opening of that institution.

The club is still in a flourishing condition with a live membership (some of whom are the original members) and the success of the organization is largely due to the unflinching interest and capability of Mr. Dunmore, who after ten years is still the popular director.

ALBERTA CATTLE CREATE RECORDS

The C.P.R. farm at Strathmore recently qualified a pair of Holstein heifers in the 365-day division of the R.O.P. The three-year-old heifer, Strathmore Nora Canary, in her lactation period yielded 21,666 lbs. of milk, containing 992.50 lbs. butter, while the two-year-old Strathmore Walker Ormsby Mechtild, closed her year with 19,193 lbs. milk containing 857.50 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.99 per cent. fat.

A good record under official test has been finished by the two-year-old Holstein heifer, Hays' Rag Apple Silver, owned by W. H. and F. L. Fletcher, Brant. In her first lactation period this heifer produced 17,147 lbs. milk, containing 730 lbs. butter. She was milked twice daily during the entire period and gave up to 1,964 lbs. in a month.

A three-year-old Holstein heifer, U Canary De Kol Betsy, bred and owned by the University of Alberta, Edmonton, finished her second lactation period under official test in the 365-day division of the R.O.P. with a production of 14,107 lbs. milk containing 666.25 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.78 per cent. fat.

EXCITING TALKIE AT ELITE THEATRE

"MEN OF THE NORTH" STORY HUNT OF MOUNTED POLICE FOR LAWBREAKER

Mystery dramas have been many on the screen lately, but never one as tense, gripping, and romantic as "Men of the North," which takes all the elements of a mystery play and unfolds them in the French Canadian wilds, in gorgeous settings of snow-clad mountains. The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture playing Thurs. Fri. and Sat. at the Elite Theatre, is one of the unique entertainments of the season.

With Gilbert Roland as the hero, and Barbara Leonard as heroine, the picture unfolds a mystery of Northwest Mounted Police as detectives, trailing their man, (but the wrong one), in a series of bewildering thrills. The thrills of ski jumps, dog-sled races, battles against blizzards, and the lure of the great outdoors form a background, and the fiery romance of the North wood embellishes the plot.

Roland is superb as the French Canadian trapper hero, who, suspected of robbery, flees to the snows, pursued by mounted police, and wins vindication in a powerful dramatic plot. Miss Leonard as the millionaire mine owner's daughter plays her role cleverly and is beautiful to look on.

A COLLEGE STEAL

And so "Lucky" Diehl decided to go to college. "How it all happened, I was passing the place and liked the looks of the boys and they got nice colors, too, blue and white, so I made up my mind then and there, I would join," he explained.

Somebody interrupted to inform him that one doesn't join a college; one goes to it, if one is bright enough through it.

"Sure, that was me," said Dusky. "I went through it, all through it; in fact I cleaned out the joint."

Some folks go to no end of trouble to get into a college. They graduate from grade school and from high school and even at that they frequently lack the required number of credits, so they cram some more and then sweat through a grueling entrance examination.

But Dusky's scheme was much simpler than that.

When he was sixteen, he was still in the sixth grade, public school, and at the rate he was traveling, he would have reached the graduating class about the same time his own grandson got there.

So one day the principal came to him and said: "Diehl I got a good job for you in a department store as an errand boy. You're too clever for us here; we give up. We've tried all the tricks we know on you, but you've outsmarted us every time. Take ninety-nine children out of one hundred who come here; we can make them believe that seven times nine are sixty-three. But we can't fool you. So we'd both be happier if you took the job."

Dusky took the job in the department store.

During the following month, he took seven dozen pairs of silk stockings, nine cigar lighters, four watches, eleven neckties, three sweaters, and sundry other articles too numerous to mention; and then a floor-walker took him in the act, and Dusky took the air.

After that, Dusky took on several other jobs, one of which landed him in stir for three years, including time off for good behaviour. It was this job which won for Dusky the reputation of being not quite bright for, of the two hundred-odd persons in the car of the subway train in which he was riding, Dusky chose to pick the pocket of a detective.

Dusky found it difficult to scratch a living after his release. It was not that the cops annoyed him. The particular detective who had arrested him, bought a farm and moved to another state, and the other dicks ignored Dusky, as small fry not worth their attention.

That was all right with Dusky, but what hurt him was that other crooks avoided him. Before his arrest, he had been invited to share the spoils and the work in several stick-ups and loot robberies, and even "Legger" Bartels, the beer king, had hired him on a few occasions to run a truck of booze into the city from a Freeport, Long Island landing place.

But now even such fellows as Lou Giltz, who achieved the apparently impossible by being feeble-minded as he looked, high-hatted and cold-shouldered Dusky. No one gave Dusky a break. No one let him horn in on a deal. "We can't take chances on a dumb head gumming up the

for COLICKY BABIES

... THROUGH CASTORIA'S GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

Cast H. Fisher
CASTORIA
CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

works," they told him. And when he himself planned some bit of work in which he needed help, he was invariably turned down by all he approached with some such remark as: "Nah, I don't want to hear all about this big thing you got framed up. I know what it is; you're going to pick some dip's pocket. Count me out!"

It takes more cleverness and courage than Dusky possessed to work a racket all alone and make big money at it. Very few games can be played successfully by a lone hand; even in dipping it is not unusual for the pocket picker to have a confederate. And, anyhow, Dusky was no longer very keen on dipping after his unfortunate experience; but he shared mankind's common weakness for big and easy money.

Dusky racked his brain evolving schemes which could be carried out single-handed, and because he was on a generous and romantic nature, his schemes were grandiose. But they remained only daydreams, and meanwhile he sank to rolling luses, the lowest form of dipping.

One late October afternoon, Dusky followed a drunk down the subway. The drunk seated himself between two women, and all three of them remained put, so Dusky had no chance to work. For he had seen the drunk replace his wallet in his hip pocket in a speakeasy.

At One Hundred and Sixteenth St., the drunk got out, and Dusky went after him. However, two other men who had come out of one of the other cars on the train, called a greet line to the drunk and then linked their arms in his and led him up the stairs.

Because he had nothing else to do, Dusky went up into the street, too. He and no sooner stepped out of the block than he found himself engulfed by a mob of boys who were milling around furiously and shouting themselves hoarse. These boys all wore hats that closely resembled sailor hats in shape; the hats were blue in color with little white buttons in the center of the top.

The crowd of them moved slowly up One Hundred and Sixteenth Street and finally one fellow with a stentorian voice succeeded in bulging them into forming a line. Each chap placed his hands on the shoulders of the man ahead of him. They did not walk; they danced like wild movie-picture Indians, and their line wiggled in and out like a wriggling snake. They kept whooping it up lustily with ear-splitting yells.

The mildly hysterical chap with the foghorn voice ran up and down the line waving his arms madly, and at length, he jumped about four feet into the air which seemed to be a signal for the gang to break into a cheer. As Dusky recalled it later, this cheer went:

"Rah—rah—Boom! Hoo—ooo—rah! Choo—choo—choo—choo—choo—Boom!"

Thirty-three—thirty-three—rah! "Ah! Collegiate!" said Dusky to himself. "They're gonna play some-body football."

Out of curiosity, he followed the snake line. It turned through a gate into a large open field, and Dusky, seeing that there was no gatekeeper and that many of the crowd of on-lookers followed the boys through the gate, also went in.

The boys broke rank and piled out on the field where they crowded together all in one bunch and started to cheer again. This one went something like:

"Bananas—boloney—apple sauce—goo! Thirty-four—thirty-four—thirty-four—boom!"

"Hot stuff" thought Dusky. "These boys certainly know how to enjoy themselves. Wish I had went to college."

He looked around him too to see that the field was almost surrounded by tall buildings which were bedecked with flags—American flags and blue flags which bore the name "River-side" in white letters.

Another snake line of boys filed into the field from an entrance on the opposite side. These boys also broke rank and then huddled together and cheered.

A man stepped up to Dusky—he happened to be one of the engineers of the institution's central heating plant—and asked for a light.

Dusky handed him an envelope of paper matches and inquired: "Is this here Riverside College?"

"Riverside University," corrected the engineer. "There's a difference, you know. A college has only undergraduate students; a university has postgraduate and professional schools."

"Yeah," Dusky said, who had no notion of what the other was talking about. "Big place they got here."

"I'll say so. Why they have more than four thousand undergraduates alone."

"All them big buildings over there," said Dusky, nodding toward the west side of the field, "is that what they study in?"

"Only the first one," explained the engineer. That first one is Hensen Hall and it is used for classrooms for undergraduate students. The building next to it—the one in the middle—is Fendley Hall; that's a dormitory for undergraduate students. The other building is Mortimer Hall; a dorm for grads."

"You mean that's where they sleep?"

"Yes. The dormitory is a building containing rooms in which students hang up pennants and pictures of girls—and in which they sleep."

Dusky now noticed that a pole, about ten feet high and fitted with two crossbars had been erected in the center of the field. A flag bearing the numerals "23" was fastened to its top.

Some one blew a whistle. The group of boys with whom Dusky had come into the field with, bunched themselves under and around the pole. The whistle blew again. The second group of boys—the freshmen—stormed forward. The fun was on! Freshmen grabbed sophs and tried to drag them away from the pole. Sophs grabbed freshmen, pushed or threw them bodily away from the pole. Everything went. Hats went, shirts went, even undershirts went, and a few pairs of trousers.

"What's the idea?" asked Dusky. "I thought they would play foot—"

"No, no—this is the flag rush!" explained the engineer. "The freshmen have fifteen minutes in which to get the soph flag."

Even as he spoke, two freshmen picked up a classmate and threw him on top of the sophs. The freshmen used sophomore heads and shoulders as stepping-stones. Finally, he got hold of one of the crossbars of the pole. Up he went! He seized the soph flag and waved it triumphantly.

Then rioting broke out in earnest. Fights broke out all over the lot. Upper class men intervened. Shouts went up for help. Hundreds of men came tumbling out of the two dormitories and joined the fray.

For twenty minutes, Dusky enjoyed the spectacle; he grew so excited it required all his will power to restrain himself from plunging into the scrap. He was, in truth, in the act of stripping off his light topcoat, when another idea occurred to him. He had heard a jingling in his trouser pocket—a jingling caused by a pen knife and a ring of skeleton keys relics of his lost-breaking days.

That dormitory, it struck him, must be empty; most of the boys were down here on the field fighting. It cost a lot of money to go to college—so he had heard—and he had also heard that college boys are always writing home for money. Some of that money must be in those dormitory rooms. Here was a chance to clean up. Dusky was himself only twenty-three, and he looked younger because of his slimmness and the naive expression on his face. He could pass as one of the students easily. At any rate, it was worth trying. If some one stopped him, he could give the excuse that he was visiting one of the boys in their rooms.

No one tried to stop him. The elevator man in Fendley Hall greeted him with: "Hello, who won the rush?" and then asked: "What floor?"

"Fourth," said Dusky. And then "The freshmen are mopping up."

The corridor of the fourth floor was deserted. It was a long corridor and Dusky passed up and down it once. He'd be in a serious jam, he realized, if he were caught in the act. However, it was not very difficult to determine which rooms had present occupants. It was only twenty minutes to five, but to all practical purposes, it was twilight because the sky was overcast with heavy clouds.

Dusky noticed that only three of the eleven rooms on his floor were lighted; it was easy to tell that because all of the doors had glass transoms. Experimentally, he tried the knob of one of the dark rooms and found the door locked. The first skeleton key he tried opened the lock, and a moment later, Dusky was in a college boy's room.

The room was buried under books; there were books on every piece of furniture including the bed. The walls were lined with photographs and the two top drawers of the bureau contained nothing but photographs. But this college boy was consistent and also constant—all of the pictures were of the same girl.

It took Dusky five minutes to find what he wanted—the wallet. In a pocket of a coat hanging in a closet. There were eighteen dollars in the wallet.

Dusky sneaked across the corridor and tried another room. Its occupant had left his wallet on top of his book case, saving Dusky the trouble of a search.

In all, Dusky entered five rooms before calling it an evening. He fished two hundred and forty-six dollars in cash, two watches, four pairs of cuff links, three cigar lighters and one pair of shirt studs. On his way home, he dropped into the place of "Cheatem" Sears, a fence, who gave him thirty dollars for the jewelry. So in all, Dusky's spoils amounted to two hundred and seventy-six dollars and two books.

Special attention must be given these two books. Dusky himself valued them highly. He had stolen them on the impulse of the moment from the last room in which he had worked. Everything had proceeded so smoothly—and profitably—that Dusky conceived the idea of calling again some later day. Dusky liked everything about the place; he liked the atmosphere and the surroundings and he liked the boys. He was, in fact, quite fond of the boys. Their cheering, their fighting, and their careless habit of letting filled wallets lie around their rooms made quite a hit with him. So Dusky determined to return often.

And he decided that it might be helpful to have a couple of books—real college books—under his arm on his return trips. The books would tend to establish him among those who belonged.

Back in his own room, curiosity prompted him to examine the books. He intended to read them if he found them interesting; now that he had joined a college he felt that it would do him no harm if he absorbed a little collegiate learning. It must be said that he could read fairly well; his trouble in public school had been caused by "times" and "gumsinta." (Five times four are twenty, and seven gumsinta forty-two, six times, et cetera.)

So he opened one of the books and stared several minutes at the headline:

Horace
Sermonum
Liber Secundus

Then he stared several more minutes at the first line:

Sunt quibus in satira videtur nimis acer et ultra—

He finally muttered: "Greek," and tossed the book aside. "I'll take it down to Joe's place when I eat and see if he can read it."

He opened the second book at random and this is what stared him in the face:

Chemical name is ditolyl-diazobeta-naphthylamine-6-sulphonio-beta-naphthylamine-3,6-disulphonate.

Impatiently, he turned to another page:

—and gas derives carbon bisulphid, benzol, toluol, sulphur, cyanogen—

He slammed the book shut. The cover bore the words: "Chemistry."

"Just my luck to steal two books of dead languages," he groaned. "Oh well, they play nice games even if the books they read are not so hot."

WHAT IS GOOD-WILL?

Good will, we are told, is the ultimate solution of the problems facing those who have been placed in charge of great countries. In short, it offers a way out of all the material problems in which this age or any age is faced.

It is thought that ethical and moral problems will respond to this idealistic treatment.

The greatest advantage of Christianity considered in comparison to the philosophies of other religions is the fact of good will as a corner-stone.

The fact is that Christianity converted good will from a personal instinct into a basic requirement of human relations.

This good will which we cultivate really furnishes the answer to a perplexed world upon most questions.
It gives one, if one has nothing more definite, a workable, moral philosophy.

Good will is a matter of wishing the other man well.

CONTINUATION OF FOURTH GATHERING

ceived, the time limit had to be extended, and indeed it was fairly late ere the last contestants had been adjudged, but very shortly after the advertised time the grand evening concert at which each winning entry was repeated for the benefit of a packed theatre in which even standing room was at a premium. Mr.
Good, the president of the 1932 festival, introduced Mr. J. R. Love, M.L.A., as the chairman for the evening.

In his somewhat short remarks,
Mr. Love advanced the argument happy conclusion, including those who so kindly officiated as accompanists.

A recent shipment over the Canadian National Express consisted of two polar bear cubs on their way to Hagenbach and Company, world famous wild animal trainers at Nashua, New Hampshire. These two cubs were captured some two months ago by Frank Lindell, Churchill trapper at a point some 700 miles northwest of Churchill, within the barren lands after the mother of the two had been shot and killed.

According to a report of the United States commerce department, spendings of United States motorists in the Dominion in 1931 were only 7 per cent. less than in the previous year and 12.7 per cent. less than in the peak year of 1929. Automobiles crossing north in 1931 numbered 4,909,989, and their occupants spent $188,000,000. The interchange of tourists is one in which Canada has much the better of it. The decline in number of tourists has been about the same either way. But Canadians are spending much less proportionately. In 1931, American expenditures in Canada were estimated at $238,755,000, while Canadians spent $69,902,000 in the United States. The tourist credit balance in Canada's favor has declined only about $20-000,000 from the $200,000,000 peak of 1929. The net balance was $179,670-000 in 1928; $201,154,000 in 1929;
$193,431,000 in 1930, and $181,856,000 in 1931.

annual Spring Flower and Tulip

The Public Works committee presented the following report which was, on motion, accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting and the recommendations endorsed.

We have had the culvert on Main street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues fully repaired. This repair, for both material and labor, cost $71.05. All available material for the repair of streets and crossings has been hauled and the streets and crossings are now in a fair state of repair.

Mr. W. S. Goulet has installed a culvert to carry all water past his private crossing which has made a considerable improvement. Mr. Goulet has volunteered to supply a culvert for installation at the corner of Third Avenue and Queen Street which can be installed by the Utility man. We would therefore recommend the acceptance of this kind offer.

The Health committee presented the following report which was, on motion, accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

With the co-operation of the owners of trucks in the Town of Wainwright and by the employment of several of the unemployed in town, we have now made a complete clean-up of the lanes and beg to report that the sanitary condition of the town is now in excellent condition.

Many of the householders deserve a great deal of credit for the manner in which they had deposited their refuse on the lanes but unfortunately there were some who have no regard for the health of either themselves or their neighbors. We are at a loss to understand this entire disregard for public health and take this opportunity of advising these householders that should they persist in creating such an unsanitary condition, they will be prosecuted under the Health Act of the Province of Alberta.

Now that the refuse has been removed, we would suggest that the householders obtain some convenient receptacle for the deposit of their refuse; so that the lanes in town may be preserved in a neat appearance.

On motion, the Mayor was authorized to call a public meeting of the citizens of the Town of Wainwright for 8 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday, the 11th day of May, 1932, for the purpose of discussing the advisability of holding a demonstration in the Town of Wainwright on the 1st day of July next and in case it was decided to hold the demonstration, to make arrangements for staging this demonstration.

On motion Council was regularly adjourned.

GET GOOD STOCK

In gardening the greatest outlay is the trouble and care taken by the gardener himself, yet no matter how much time and work is devoted to the business unless the seed and nursery stock are right the results are sure to be disappointing. Because these things only cost a few cents sometimes one is apt to overlook the importance of securing the most satisfactory. First of all both nursery stock that is rose bushes, shrubs, plants, trees and so on, and seeds must be suitable to Canadian conditions and if one lives in a northern part of the country, must be suitable to local conditions as well. Secondly, the best quality, such as that handled by a reputable seed house, is imperative, in nursery stocks the goods must be packed carefully, so that the roots will remain moist, the stems green and pliable and in the case of roses, shrubs and other woody plants there must be plenty of live buds. Given that sort of a stock, and handled so as to avoid needless exposure of the roots to the air, one is off to a good start. Only with seed, grown and matured by experts, who take every precaution against mixing of varieties by bees and other insects, will give the individual coloring, and delicate shapes found in the best flowers today, and the earliness and crispness of the only vegetables worth growing in the home garden. One cannot afford to risk all the thought and care that is put into a garden by taking a chance on seed, and nursery stock of an unknown or amateur origin.

Commercial Fertilizer

Commercial fertilizers offer a good substitute for well rotted manure, and to hasten many of the leafy vegetables along some of these chemical manures are almost indispensable. For the average garden, a good complete or mixed commercial fertilizer is advised. All of these are sold with the formulae attached and one should insist on at least four per cent nitrogen, eight per cent phosphorus, and from four to eight per cent of potash. Technically, this is known as a 4-8-4 to a 4-8-8. The effect of nitrogen on the growth of a plant is more quickly marked than that of the other two elements, states the regular vegetable gardening, bulletin issued by the Ontario Agricultural College.

Nitrogen has a direct influence on the development of the leafy parts of the plant and imparts a deep green color to the leaves. It is, therefore, very valuable for those leafy types of vegetables and also as a tonic in transplanting all vegetables. With later-maturing sorts such as tomatoes and corn, nitrogen should be applied in the early stages only. Phosphorus fertilizers are usually found to be valuable for growing vegetables on practically all soils. Potash the third element in commercial fertilizer, is essential to starch formation, and green plants and root crops particularly need it. On sandy and muck soils especially, potash is advised, as these soils are usually deficient in this valuable element.

Fruits for the Small Garden

Some people desire to include some fruit trees and bushes with the garden. If there is room, a summer apple like the Yellow Transparent, cooking; for fall, Wealthy; for early winter the McIntosh or Delicious; an Astrachan or Melba can be chosen for dessert purposes, or Duchess for late winter, the Northern Spy. In the Prairie Provinces or Northern Quebec or Ontario, one will probably have to forego these varieties, but there are some new hardy types as well as good crabapples available. Among the sweet cherries, Windsor Bin and Tartarian are recommended growing of course, only in the warm or districts, while Montgomery and Early Richmond are standards of the other type. Clapps Favorite is one of the best pears coming very early while Bartlett is a good later sort. Plums are grown almost anywhere in Canada, as well as currants, raspberries, strawberries, blackcaps, and thimble berries. Grapes are fairly hardy and among the best are the Lindley, Brighton and Delaware. In making a selection of the various kinds and varieties, particularly for the home garden it is important to remember the season so that one will have a steady supply of fresh fruit from the first of July on.

In addition to the new stamp tax on cheques and bills of exchange, taxes on railway chair seats, sleeping car berths, telegrams, cables, radio messages, and long distance telephone calls are now in effect.

The tax on railway chair seats is 10 cents on each seat and on berths, 10 per cent, with a minimum of 25 cents. Where the cost of telegrams, cables, radio messages, and long distance telephone calls is 15 cents or more the tax is five cents. Cheque stamp taxes are three cents from $5 to $100, and six cents above $100.

Hon. Vernon W. Smith, provincial minister of telephones, recently said that the new tax on long distance calls would undoubtedly reduce business on the government lines. Majority of calls, he intimated, were greater than 15 cents. The Alberta government will have to absorb the tax on calls franked by members of the legislature and other government officials.

ACID
STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior tooth-paste that safeguards against acid-mouth. (Made in Canada.)

A GOOD HEART

It was not until 1628 that Harvey published his discovery of the circulation of the blood. Previous to that time, the function of the heart was not understood. It was known to be an important organ, and was credited with being the centre of some of our emotions. We retain in our language such expressions as "a broken heart" and "from the bottom of my heart" which are evidence of the old belief.

The heart is an essential organ. Upon its smooth running and its capacity to meet the demands thrown upon it, depends much of our ability to work, play and enjoy the activities of life.

Damage to the heart leads to a curtailment of activity; progressing further, it may cause pain and bring the sufferer to the point where he becomes dependent upon others as a result of no longer being able to do his share of work.

It is obviously desirable to prevent damage to the heart. To do so, means that we prevent suffering and keep the individual fit to work and to be self-supporting, which means that a good heart is a great asset.

The heart is made up of several parts, and each part may be damaged in more than one way. There are numerous conditions which may lead to heart disease, but there are a few outstanding or principal causes to which attention is directed. The chief cause of heart disease in early life is acute rheumatism. Growing pains and chorea or St. Vitus dance are apparently due to the infection which causes rheumatism. It seems that the germ of rheumatism may gain entrance through infected tonsils, and so it is a responsibility of parents to see that the mouths and throats of their children are kept in a healthy state.

Improper habits of living lead to the earlier breaking down of the essential organs of the body. The adult who eats too much, who sleeps too little and who exercises little or not at all, throws a strain on such organs as his heart, and this brings about a premature old age.

Reasonable attention to the few simple fundamentals of healthy living and the avoidance of over-indulgences is the part of wisdom and affords a means of prevention.

A damaged heart must be protected if it is not to become worse. The activities of life must be limited and kept within the capacity of the damaged organ. If this is done, the heart will be, in most cases, equal to the demands which are thrown upon it.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Hints for the Household

SPRING FOR WAFFLES

By Betty Barclay

When the men come in from fishing, when the guests have finished the last rubber, or when the family is spending a friendly evening at home—serve waffles. Properly made waffles, with good butter and real syrup, are fit for a king.

Plain Waffles

2 cups special cake flour, sifted
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks, well beaten
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons melted butter
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Combine egg yolks, milk and butter. Add to flour, beating until smooth. Fold in egg whites. Bake on hot greased waffle iron. Serve hot with butter and syrup. Makes six 4-section waffles.

Pecan Waffles

2½ cups special cake flour, sifted
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ cups milk
2 egg yolks, well beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
¾ cup pecan meats, chopped
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar and sift together twice. Combine milk, egg yolks and butter; add to flour. Fold in egg whites. Just before baking, add pecans. Bake on hot, greased waffle iron. Serve hot with butter and syrup. Makes six 4-section waffles.

COFFEE-FLAVORED FOODS

Don't stick to one flavor in your cooking. A change will be appreciated even by a husband who swears by your ability. Coffee is sometimes almost entirely ignored as a flavoring agent. Yet the following recipes are but two samples of delicious dishes thus flavored:

Coffee Frappé

1 egg white
½ cup cold water
½ cup ground coffee
1 quart boiling water
1 cup sugar

Beat the white of the egg slightly and add the cold water and ground coffee. Place this in a coffee-pot and pour over it the boiling water. Boil two minutes, then stand where it will infuse. After ten minutes, strain add sugar, cool and freeze. Serve in tall thin glasses with whipped cream. If a percolator is used, make a quart of clear black coffee.

Jelly Delight

1 ounce (2 tablespoons) granulated gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
3 cups strong coffee
Follow standard directions for making jelly. Particularly good served with whipped cream.

Orange Cocoa Cake

4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup orange juice
Cream fat and sugar. Add beaten egg yolks. Mix well. Sift dry ingredients together. Add alternately with orange juice. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in 2 layers in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 15 to 20 minutes. Put layers together and frost with

Orange Cocoa Frosting

2 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups powdered sugar
Grated rind 2 oranges
½ cup cocoa
6 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons orange marmalade (or ½ cup candied orange peel)
Cream butter and sugar and add grated orange rind, cocoa and enough orange juice to soften sugar. Stir in orange marmalade. Finely cut candied orange peel may be substituted for marmalade.

Fruit Salad for Twenty-four

2 quarts orange pieces
2 quarts sliced bananas (or apples, pears, peaches)
2 cups seedless raisins
2 cups marshmallows, quartered
¾ cup mayonnaise
3 large or 4 small heads of lettuce
Peel oranges, removing all skin down to juicy pulp. Cut in slices and then in pieces. Combine fruits and marshmallows with mayonnaise, which has been smoothly blended with ½ cup of orange juice saved in preparing oranges. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves. For a picnic lunch, fruit mixture may be packed in large glass jars. Wrap washed lettuce leaves in wet cloths and newspaper to keep crisp.

WHEN TO PLANT SUNFLOWERS

Special studies as to the best time at which to plant sunflower seed have been made by the Dominion Experimental Farms. The results of these studies are summarized as follows: (1) early seeding has given the highest average yield over a period of ten years; (2) cool weather immediately following seeding will retard germination and apparently results in lower yields, particularly if the land is heavy and cold; (3) the best results will be obtained over a period of years by seeding as early as possible, providing the ground is warm and indications point to a period of warm weather immediately following.

The average cost of new tires to American motorists today is fifty-nine cents per thousand miles, compared with $5.67 in the year 1914.

The cost of transmitting 1,000,000 horsepower-hours of electrical energy is $195 as compared with $65 for transmitting as much energy in the form of gas.

again. He had the two books under his arm and a definite plan in his head. On his previous visit, he had noticed a store in which books, stationery and other student accessories were sold, and in the window of this store he had seen two kinds of hats on display—the sailor type hat and a small peaked cap just large enough to cover the back of his skull. He had been informed that the sailor hats were worn by the sophomores and the small caps by the freshmen. Because he liked the sailor hats better, Dusky decided to skip the freshmen year and go right into the sophomore class.

He entered the store and bought a sophomore hat. He donned the new hat after folding his cap and sticking it into the inside pocket of his coat. Then he strode across the field and marched boldly into Pendley Hall. It was now six thirty in the evening; Dusky had shrewdly chosen the supper hour as the time when a large proportion of the boys would not be in their rooms.

His guess was a good one. Dusky had the elevator take him up to the fifth floor. He walked up and down the north corridor and found but two transoms brightened by room lights.

He had even better luck than on his first visit. And the work was so simple that it was almost a crime to do it. The locks opened promptly to the invitation of Dusky's skeleton keys. In all of the five rooms he entered, he found money and trinkets which could be easily disposed of. After he had visited the fence, he counted his money and found that the evening's work had netted four hundred and twenty-two dollars.

So Dusky decided that he had discovered a new racket. "And this racket is the cat's!" he told himself. "There's practically no danger to it and the work is a cinch. And I go up there often enough, maybe I'll even be able to pick up an education."

But he did not let success go to his head. Although not overbright, he was equipped with a native shrewdness which warned him that he must not overdo a good thing. He spent a good deal of thought on the matter and was clever enough to see that the biggest thing in his favor was the carelessness of the college boys. He must take heed not to arouse them too violently or get them too mad. He must nurse them along. After pulling a job, he must give them enough time to slip back into a careless sense of security. So he determined to go up to Riverside College only once every other week.

Of course he kept changing the day of the week and he also varied his working hours. Sometimes he went in the morning or early afternoon when the classes were in session; sometimes he went during the noon luncheon period, and sometimes he went evenings. He worked not only in Pendley Hall, the undergraduate dormitory, but also Mortimer Hall, the graduate dormitory.

His luck fluctuated from pretty good to excellent. His work netted him less than two hundred dollars only once, and that was more than balanced by another occasion on which his proceeds amounted to over five hundred.

November passed and so did December and January. Dusky had now made eight pilfering excursions with out encountering a dangerous obstacle.

And then the break came.

Dusky was in Room 315 in Pendley Hall. It was the supper hour, and Dusky was working with the aid of his flashlight. He was searching a bureau drawer when he suddenly heard voices and then the clicking of a key.

He just had time enough to slip into the clothes closet.

Two men came into the room. Dusky was trapped! And he had his pockets full of jewelry which did not belong to him! He had found the door to this room locked, but he had not locked it after him when he entered. Whichever of these two men had inserted his key in the lock, must have noticed that the door was only closed, not locked. That was enough to cause suspicion; and, in addition, Dusky had not entirely closed the bureau drawer.

They were two against one, and, with one yell, they could bring a few hundred others to the scene; and Dusky was unarmed; he had never carried a gat.

His heart leaped into his mouth and he breathed rapidly, holding his hand over his mouth to smother the sound.

The college boys were also out of breath. "For Pete's sake, wiggle!" cried one of them. "They'll be here in a minute and they're crazy enough to—"

"Keep your shirt on!" interrupted the other. "The door's locked. I gotta sink this letter first."

"Who's it from—Lillian?"

"Yeah."

"If your governor ever finds out you're rushing a chorus girl, good night! But who's going to tell him?"

"Those letters would be a rich find for somebody. If the wrong guy got hold of them, he could blackmail your head off. Why don't you tear them up?"

"Tear up Lillian's letters? Man, I read myself to sleep with 'em every night. No one will find them. I keep them here in a slit in my mattress."

"Yeah. Now that's an original hiding place, ain't it? Come on, hurry!"

"Well, no one has ever looked in my mattress yet. Ready? Open the window and see if the coast is clear. O.K.? Then beat it. Up the fire escape to the fifth floor and then into Ralph's place. Let's go. I'm following you!"

There was a long silence and then Dusky emerged from the closet. He flashed his light cautiously around the room and then stepped up to the bed. It took him only a few seconds to find the letters hidden in the mattress. There were six of them, tied with a string, all in pale-blue envelopes. He opened one of them and read:

DEAR JIMMY: I was delighted to hear you was elected to the president of the sophomore class. I am sending my great big hero one billion kisses and hugs—

"Yeah," muttered Dusky, "these are the love letters all right. Leastways they sound like it."

He examined the envelopes and found they were all addressed to Mr. James Harpelle, Pendley Hall, Riverside University, New York.

He was so excited that he did not stop for further pilfering. These letters meant real money! No more small pickings for him! Only rich fellows had "governors." This college boy would be able to pay a fancy price for the return of Lillian's letters.

Dusky picked up his books—which he had laid on top of another pile of books on a chair when he entered—and left the room. He slipped down the corridor, intending to go down the rear staircase. He turned into a short semidark hall, and then—

A door swung suddenly open and five or six men pounced upon Dusky. One of them threw a large bag over his head and pulled it down to his chest where it was secured with a rope.

There was a shout and then there were a thousand shouts. Dusky could see nothing, and, although he struggled hard, he could not get free of the cord which held the bag over his head and his arms against his sides. But he heard and felt plenty.

He heard the sounds of many feet coming closer, closer; heard grunts, groans and the thuds of bodies bumping against each other. Then he felt himself pulled this way and that and both ways at the same time. Elbows were poked into his ribs; his shins were kicked; two or three heads cracked against his and a blow—a misdirected blow caught him on the right eye. He was wrestled to the floor three or four times, picked up bodily, dropped again and pulled along by the legs.

Finally, he was lifted by the legs and arms simultaneously and carried down the stairs. Then he was pushed and pulled across a sidewalk and lifted again and then dumped unceremoniously on a floor. Suddenly the floor began to move. He guessed he was in a car. Actually, he was in a moving van.

It was a fast ride and a rough one. Most of it—it seemed to Dusky—was over cobblestones. He was jounced and bounced up and down and from one side to the other. Before the ride ended, he was hoping he was in an ambulance and being taken to some hospital. He had enough aches and bruises to keep a staff of doctors busy.
